THOUGHTS FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

We are knee-deep in summer! The summer of '23 has been hot in many ways. High school students were dismissed for the summer to pursue "hot" challenges at camps and summer jobs. College students spent their first summer days preparing for internships or for their "hot" career-starts. The public health workforce managed "hot" issues ranging from Medicaid expansion to federal funding increases. Some of these hot issues are still "burning" as we speak while our NC legislature is yet to pass the new 2023-24 state budget.

Our institution received correspondence from several health-science students who were nervous that their "hot" career take-off might be slow; we assured them that these feelings of insecurity are normal, and soon they will be securely nestled into their chosen professions.

During this hot summer, we have also witnessed public health department leaders prioritizing their options for program expansions or dissolutions; for financial management ideas; for workforce development strategies; and for environmental air quality during the obvious global warming trend.

There's probably no such thing as the wrong time to address the hot issues in public health; our health departments and healthcare workforce are charged with handling the present while they prepare for the future, and that is a tremendous responsibility!

In public health leadership, we know that our work fills a large part of our life, and we wouldn't have it any other way because we love what you do; but as we strive to avoid burnout from tackling all of the "hot" issues we face, we become better at determining the right allocation of time, talent, and resources for each issue, and accepting that there will be waves where our priorities will shift every single day.

A question that we could ask ourselves every day is: "Am I doing the most important thing that needs to be done right now?" When we feel as if we are working on the most important problem at the time, then we can feel good that the "hot" issues will be addressed with the urgency with which they deserve. We often find that public health requires us to do things today that we are not quite ready to do, but that is part of the expected readiness of public health, and that is how we prove to ourselves that we can truly tackle the "hot" issues and solve them victoriously for the benefit of our populations.

There is a feeling of OMG when we push through those moments to a successful end.

So for the remainder of this hot summer, we will expect that great things will continue to happen, and we will learn and grow along with our communities. We will not limit ourselves regardless of how hard Mr. Sunshine glows on us....we will not be a hot-mess, we will become a hot-success! 😊 .

WE CAN TRULY
TACKLE THE "HOT"
ISSUES AND SOLVE
THEM
VICTORIOUSLY FOR THE BENEFIT OF OUR POPULATIONS.

The Association of North Carolina Boards of Health (ANCBH) has been working to improve public health for 42 years. Our purposes include promoting high standards of comprehensive public health services, providing consultation and education for facilitating exchange of ideas, supporting health policy and financial issues, promoting close working relationships between local Boards of Health, and supporting public awareness of public health issues and dangers. A simple way to understand how ANCBH fits in is: each county has a health department with Health Director and an appointed Board of Health or Advisory Committee to focus on public health at the county level.

ANCBH focuses on public health on the state level, supporting each county unit across the state.

The ANCBH Board members are currently in a reinvention process to reestablish our visibility and collaboration with local boards of health in our state. With a part-time Executive Director and 13 board members from across the state and in and from several health-related disciplines, we are on the right track to set and meet our goals for the year.

The N.C. Injury and Violence Prevention Branch envisions North Carolina free from injuries and violence where lives are lived to their full potential. The work of the branch includes:

- Collecting and analyzing injury data to better understand the problem.
- Implementing programs to prevent injuries and violence.
- Coordinating and assisting groups working to prevent injury and violence to address the problem comprehensively.

Since January 2, 2010, nearly all restaurants and bars in North Carolina, and many lodging establishments, have been smoke-free, thanks to N.C. General Statute 130A-497, otherwise known as North Carolina's Smoke-Free Restaurants and Bars Law. The purposes of the law included to eliminate exposure to second-hand smoke; to set a social norm for youth to not start smoking; and to help smokers who wanted to quit to be able to by reducing their constant reminders from people who still smoke. The law was made prior to the big increase in vaping, but the law does allow for any establishment to add vaping prohibitions. Businesses reported they preferred the "all or none" rule where all restaurants and bars had to prohibit smoking at the same time because this leveled the playing field. A webinar is now being planned to refresh memories and to teach new Health Directors and BOH members about the law.

The newest division in NC DHHS, The Division of Child and Family Well-Being (DCFW), works to meet the health, social and emotional needs of children, youth, and families in North Carolina. Their current focus is on child nutrition and access to nutritious and plentiful foods for children. The division director is Yvonne Copeland.

ANCBH AWARD RECIPIENTS

2023-2024

The Outstanding Board of Health award will go to Stanly County Consolidated Health and Human Services Board. The write-up outlined the board's successful efforts to "support opioid overdose and death prevention programs in Stanly County."

The Carl Durham award will be awarded to Mr. Eddie Jordan, Chair of the Surry County Board of Health. The write-up states that Mr. Jordan "has leveraged unprecedented advocacy for Public Health...and for public health initiatives across the local level." One of the examples cited was the Medication Assistance Program that is managed jointly by the health department and the EMS service. He was also instrumental in passing several public health ordinances in Surry County.

Surry County will also receive the Robert "Ed" Strother Partnership award, which will recognize Mr. Mark Willis, the Director of the Surry County Office of Substance Abuse and Recovery. SCOSAR has effectively partnered with the health department to recruit, train, and deploy Certified Peer Support Specialists to create community interventions and provide treatment to those with opioid use disorder. This volunteer group has recently applied to become a 501(c)3 nonprofit due to its huge successes.

STATE LEGISLATIVE UPDATES

There has been a lot of activity in the NC state legislature that will be impacting Environmental Health.

(House Bill 190) now Session Law 2023-65 includes a provision in Section 9.1 of the current statute that modifies the educational requirements for Registered Environmental Health Specialists (REHS). The amendments ease the educational requirements, allowing for more eligible REHS candidates, and are more consistent with the National Environmental Health Association's REHS credential requirements. This provision is effective on October 1, 2023.

(House Bill 628) now Session Law 2023-90 provides that an individual with an Associate's degree and 15 hours of sciences is eligible to become a Registered Environmental Health Associate (REHA). A REHA must be registered by the REHS Board, successfully complete Centralized Intern Training, and be authorized by the Department to carry out limited environmental health duties. A REHA is also required to complete continuing education requirements, which will be determined in REHS Board rule amendments. The REHA section is effective May 1, 2024. The limited list of duties are:

- Permitting and inspections of private wells.
- Inspections of Category I and II food establishments.
- Inspections of lodging establishments.
- Permitting and inspections of Type II or III wastewater systems, including system layouts and existing wastewater systems.
- Inspections of migrant housing.
- Inspections of schools.
- Inspections of local confinement facilities.

(House Bill 628) now Session Law 2023-90 also makes changes and additions to privatization of permitting and inspection of onsite waste disposal systems. Fees are capped depending on the type of application packet submitted by the applicant or the applicant's authorized professional agent. This section is effective September 1, 2023.

(House Bill 627) now Session Law 2023-77 On-Site Wastewater Rules
Implementation: The provisions in this bill make changes to 15A NCAC 18E (On-Site Wastewater Rules) which will take effect January 1, 2024. The state will be sending position statements and training sessions for the new onsite water protection rules.
